BY MAJ. GEN. ROBERT W. DOUGLASS, JR.
Commander Eighteenth Air Force

WITH the rebirth of the Tactical Air Command as a major component of the U. S. Air Force in December 1950, mass troop carrier operations again came to the fore and the requirement for a troop carrier air force was placed high on its list of priority actions. Plans for such a unit, based on experience gained during World War II, were culminated with the activation of the Eighteenth Air Force at Donaldson Air Force Base, Greenville, S. C. on 28 March 1951. Here, for the first time in the history of the U. S. Air Force, was established a numbered air force vested with the control of all troop carrier units within the continental United States.

Prior to presenting a more detailed analysis of Eighteenth Air Force operations, I feel it would be helpful to review briefly the history of troop carrier.

During the early stages of World War II, there was no unit with the capability for mass aerial movement of troops or supplies. To provide this capability the Ferrying Command and the air cargo division of the Air Service Command were consolidated into one unit designated as the Air Transport Command with headquarters at Washington, D. C. Later, a segment of this command moved to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio and shortly afterward to Stout Field, Indianapolis.

AIR FORCE TO ANNOUNCE 6,000 RANK BOOSTS

Names of more than 6000 Air Force officers selected for temporary promotion to captain and major will be made public on 1 March. At the same time, the first increment of promotions will be announced.

Expectation is that four promotion increments will be made during the remainder of the current fiscal year. They are expected to be of different size.

There will be about 4300 selections to captain and 2150 to major, according to prior Air Force forecasts. In April, about 250 promotions to colonel and 600 to lieutenant colonel are scheduled.

Not all of those selected will have the same date of rank, as heretofore. Instead, there will be at least one day's difference in new date of rank between the various year groups for current date of rank.

The promotions will be made from a single master list for each rank, with Headquarters announcing cut-off names for the various increments.

Senate Group O.K.'s Air Academy Bill; Graduates May Serve In Other Branches

The Air Force Academy bill was winging to final Congressional passage late this week as the Senate Armed Services Committee cleared the House-passed measure for vote.

The Senate Committee voted to approve the project unanimously after making certain amendments, including one which would permit graduates of the Air Force Academy—up to 12½ per cent of the class—to serve in another Service.

The Committee stipulated that Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott must appoint a Commission of five members to choose the site for the third Service Academy.

He must accept the recommendation of the Commission if it's unanimous.

Otherwise, he must pick a site from one of the first three recommended.

The Committee put a top authorization for the cost of the Academy at $126,000,000. Estimated cost of building the Academy was placed at $145 million by Secretary Talbott last week, after he had earlier estimated the cost at $20 million less.

The Senate Committee also voted an amendment which cuts from six to four years the period during which a special method of choosing cadets will be in force. After four years, the method currently employed by West Point and Annapolis, which assures a considerable number of Congressional appointees, will be used.

The Academy bill, with Administration support, appears headed for early floor approval by the Senate.

Manpower Pool Shortage Faces Reversal; Service Strength Cuts To Create Surplus

For the first time since Korea, the Armed Forces are likely to be confronted with a manpower pool surplus.

And this is apt to create problems as serious as the threatened manpower shortage since Korea.

Here is the explanation for the about-face in the manpower picture:

When it was first planned after the Korean truce to maintain the Services at a level-off strength of 3.5 million, Defense officials estimated it would require 1 million men a year as replacements (based on current reenlistment rates).

But studies disclosed that of the 1.1 million men turning 18½ years of age annually, 22 per cent are not qualified for military service for one reason or another.

Thus, only 850,000 would be available to meet the need for 1 million replacements.

"There was definite indication," according to Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah, "that it would be difficult to maintain our Armed Forces at 3.5 millions under existing conditions."

Then, the "New Look" changed the manpower outlook completely.

Instead of 1 million replacements a year for an Armed Forces of 3.5 million, only 800,000 are needed for a strength of 3 million—the new goal.

Of this 800,000, it is estimated that 500,000 can be procured through enlistments, leaving 300,000 to be called by the draft.

Dr. Hannah reports that whereas there were about 660,000 in the manpower pool last July, by next July the figure will go up to 800,000 and the level (Please turn to Page 767)

Vice Adm. Cassady to New Post

Vice Adm. John H. Cassady, USN, has been named to command the U. S. Naval Forces, Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean.

Admiral Cassady, who is now commander of the 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean, will relieve Vice Adm. Jerauld Wright, USN.

President Eisenhower announced on 17 Feb. that Admiral Wright will report to Norfolk 12 Apr. as the Commander in Chief, Atlantic Fleet, Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic, and associate commands. He succeeds Admiral Lynde D. McCormick, USN, who is slated to become the President of the Naval College in Newport, R. I.

Sec'y. Hits "Abuse," Assures Safeguards

Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens has reasserted his determination to safeguard Army personnel from abuse at the hands of Congressional investigators.

On Thursday night, Mr. Stevens issued, with "full approval" of President Eisenhower and the Defense Department, a strongly worded statement on this issue.

Said Mr. Stevens:

"I shall never accede to the abuse of Army personnel under any circumstances including Committee hearings.

"I shall not accede to them being brow-beaten or humiliated." (Full text of statement page 767.)

The Secretary said he had assurance from members of the Senate Permanent Investigating Committee that members of the Army would be safeguarded from abuse and humiliation during any testimony they might be asked to give before the group.

Senator McCarthy, Chairman of the Investigating Committee, said that any statement as to such an agreement was "false" and that he would continue to make a "vigorous" examination of any witnesses appearing before his committee.

Mr. Stevens issued his statement the day after he went to Capitol Hill to reiterate his protest against "unwarranted abuse of our loyal officers."

He returned to the Pentagon from a secret meeting with Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wisc.), who had called him an "awful dupe," convinced that he had been successful in this objective.

However, hardly had he returned to his office on Wednesday afternoon than the Secretary was met with a crescendo of news and editorial comment on a nation-wide basis asserting that he had "yielded," "bowed" and "capitulated" to the Senator.

A public hearing scheduled for Thursday, at which Mr. Stevens was to testify and for which he had made exhaustive preparations, was cancelled.

AF Management Program Saves Manpower At ARDC And Reserve Records Center

RECORDS CENTER

The Air Force expects to save 52 officer, 626 airmen and 24 civilian spaces as a result of establishment of the Air Reserve Records Center adjacent to the AF Finance Center, Denver, Colo.

The master personnel and machine records of all AF Reservists not on extended active duty will be consolidated at the Center.

The Center is slated to become operative as of 1 March.

The Air Force estimates that manpower savings following a period of adjustment during which there must inevitably be a certain amount of duplication will be about 82 officers, 711 airmen and 97 civilians.

ARDC

The Air Research and Development Command, following a "self-analysis" of manpower utilization, has returned to USAF Headquarters 500 authorized spaces.

This resulted from establishment of the AF Personnel and Training Research Center at Lackland AFB, Tex., in place of the Human Resources Research Center, Human Resources Research Institute, and Human Factors Operations Research Laboratories.

At the same time, ARDC sustained an additional 10 reduction in authorized spaces as the result of a cut imposed on all headquarters functions above Wing level.

Medical Training Unit Set Up At Ft. Houston

The Medical Replacement Training Center at Camp Pickett, Va., will be eliminated and its advanced functions transferred to the Medical Training Center which will be activated 1 March at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

Maj. Gen. William E. Shambra, commander of Brooke Army Medical Center, who will head the MTC as part of his command, declared that the first enlisted trainees for the training unit will arrive 5 March.

Unlike the Camp Pickett training activity, which provides the entire 16-week basic training for enlisted men selected for Army Medical Service assignment, only the last eight weeks of training will be given at MTC. The first eight weeks will be given elsewhere.

AF Dependents to Guam

A current Air Force publication reports that personnel being reassigned to Guam are applying for dependent travel in advance of departure, although a 20-week delay is forecast in assignment to Government housing.

The Air Force said that while it is true AFR 75-26 authorizes advance application for dependent travel to several overseas areas, "such application should not be made when forecast shows delay in assignment to Government housing or if private rental has not been secured in advance."

Engineer OCS Graduates

Principal speaker at the graduation exercises of the 66th class of The Engineer Officers Candidate School, Ft. Belvoir, Va., on 20 Feb., was Maj. Gen. Stanley L. Scott, commanding general of The Engineer Center. Those graduated were:

Chaplain Newman to England

Maj. (Chaplain) Charles W. Newman, Protestant Chaplain at Warren AFB, Wyo., has been assigned to the Third Air Force Headquarters, England. He has left for Camp Kilmer Port of Embarkation, N. J.

Major Newman entered the service in 1942 and was assigned, after a five-week course at Chaplains School, to the 12th Fighter Command, 12th Air Force Headquarters, Bushy Hall, Eng. He also saw service before his discharge in 1946 in Africa, Italy and the entire Mediterranean Theatre. He was recalled to active duty in Aug. 1953, and was assigned to Warren AFB.

You'll get special attention from Journal advertisers—they cater to Service personnel.

Only 6% of AF Retired Elect USCOA Participation; 21,116 Ruled Eligible

Air Force authorities report that of the 21,116 retired members eligible to participate in the Uniformed Services Contingency Option Act of 1953, only 164 members had elected to have deductions made from their pay to establish annuities for survivors.

A late Air Force report states that 2,580 declined to make an election, with over 2,000 retired members requesting additional information from the Air Force Finance Center at Denver, Colo.

The Act also requires that active duty personnel with more than 18 years' service for pay purposes who desire to participate must make an election prior to 1 May. There are about 13,500 Air Force personnel in this category.

Peress Case Could Happen Again; JAG Ordered to Study Subversive Problem

The Peress Case—or one similar to it—could happen again under provisions of current law.

That is the conclusion of many top legal minds in and out of the Pentagon.

Consequently, Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens has ordered the Judge Advocate General of the Army to study the situation and recommend remedial legislation, if necessary.

The heart of the problem is this: Former Army Major Irving Peress could not be tried by court-martial simply for refusing to answer questions concerning alleged Communist Party affiliation, on the ground that to do so would violate his Fifth Amendment privileges.

The fact is, say military legal experts, it is little recognized that membership in the Communist Party is not an offense that can be punished under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Furthermore, the Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1952 makes plain the fact that no Reservist, such as Mr. Peress, can be separated from the Service with other than an honorable discharge except by approved sentence of a court-martial or a board of officers convened by higher authority.

Such board action can require an extended period of time, since the defendant is entitled to right of appearance, counsel, and the privileges of calling witnesses, as in a court-martial.

An administrative discharge, awarded without formal board action, must be an honorable discharge and therefore entitles the recipient to Veteran benefits.

Many Pentagon legal authorities feel that changes in current legislation should be made to get around the problem posed in the Peress case.

Meantime, the Army has announced that instructions representing "policy decisions," presumably endorsed by Secretary Stevens, have been sent to commanders at all echelons to take action "under appropriate legislation against officers of their commands who are established to be security risks and to award discharges other than honorable to those officers, other than Regular Army officers, with more than three years' service who are found to be security risks by action of a board of officers."

The Army instructed that "refusal by an individual in uniform to sign the loyalty certificate or who pleads protection of either the Fifth Amendment or Article 31 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice in refusing to answer questions on matters relating to subversive activities properly put by constituted authority," including Form 98a, is considered sufficient evidence to establish an individual as a security risk."

There is considerable speculation that this procedure may be found not in accord with the Uniform Code of Military Justice and that, if utilized, it is likely to be brought quickly to the Court of Military Appeals—the Supreme Court of the Armed Services.

Those who question the legality of the action note that it means a priori establishment of an individual as a "security risk" and hence subject to "other than honorable" dismissal by a board of officers for utilizing a privilege given him both in the Constitution and the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Of course, the "other than honorable" dismissal still must be made by a board of officers, always a potentially time-consuming problem. However, the board would be able to speed up proceedings by establishing that (1) if a man uses the Fifth Amendment or Article 31 of the Justice Code under certain conditions, he is (2) a "security risk," and (3) therefore is to be given an "other than honorable" discharge.

USNR Offers MSC Comms.

The Navy is accepting applications for appointment in the Podiatry Section and in the Allied Sciences Section of the Naval Reserve's Medical Service Corps.

Those seeking appointment may be Reserve officers, enlisted men serving on active or inactive duty, or civilians between 21 and 31½ years of age. Selected applicants, who must also meet physical requirements, will be commissioned Ensigns or Lieutenants (jg).

Those who apply for appointment in the Podiatry Section must be graduates of a four-year course in chiropody. Their degree must be from an accredited school. For appointment to the grade of Lieutenant (jg) the applicant must also have four years of professional practice.

Those applying for appointment in the Allied Science Section must be graduates of an accredited institution who have earned a Master's or a Doctor's degree in science or philosophy in entomology or bacteriology.

Enlisted personnel whose applications are accepted will be sent to the U. S. Naval Schools Command, Newport, R. I., for indoctrination before being commissioned.

The deadline for applications to reach the Bureau of Personnel is 1 May, the Navy said.

AF Offers Professional Officer Graduate Courses

Officer applications are being accepted for admission to graduate professional education programs by the USAF Institute of Technology at Wright-Patterson AFB.

The programs in aerial photography, meteorology or bio-radiology (nuclear engineering effects) are open to officers through the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, who are under 37 years of age and who can meet the eligibility requirements.

Those who wish to enter the graduate aerial photography course will be required to have a bachelor's degree with a major in physics, photography, photogrammetry or mathematics (with a minor in physics). Officers with other degrees or with three years of college completed, including a course in calculus with a minimum of six hours physics and who have had extensive experience in photography may also apply.

Officers wishing to enter the graduate meteorology program must have a bachelor's degree with preparation in meteorology at either a civilian or a military school. These applicants must have completed mathematics through integral calculus. They must also have a full qualified AFCS in the Weather Occupational Area before entry into training.

Those applying for graduate work in bio-radiology must have a bachelor's degree in science, including work in physics, chemistry, physiology, and mathematics through integral calculus; a degree from a service academy; or a USAFIT undergraduate diploma. Officers who have completed some work in the field may apply for advanced training.

The AF Institute also announced that applications are being accepted for the undergraduate packaging program. The course of study is open to all officers in the grade of Lieutenant through Major who are under 37 years of age.

Eligibility requirements are: two years of college or the equivalent including mathematics through analytic geometry, or one year of college or the equivalent to including mathematics through analytic geometry, and two years experience in either civilian or military packaging research or operations.

Interested officers may apply for admission to Headquarters USAFIT, Air Missions Division, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

'Baby' Jet Engine Produced

General Electric Company has produced a miniature jet helicopter engine which is no bigger than an automobile engine but seven or eight times more powerful.

Designated the XT-58, the new engine will provide a number of economies. It uses less expensive fuel, is easier to install, uses less oil, and is easier to cool. It also gives 'copter passengers a smooth quiet and noiseless ride.

SECY. PLEDGES PROTECTION FOR PERSONNEL

FOLLOWING is the text of a statement issued Thursday, 25 Feb., by Secretary Robert T. Stevens, with the "full approval" of Acting Defense Secretary Roger M. Kyes:

"Yesterday at the conclusion of the luncheon meeting between the Republican members of the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigation and myself, a Memorandum of Understanding was issued to the press.

"Because the purpose and meaning of that memorandum have been misinterpreted, I wish at this time to make things clear. I did not at this meeting and have not receded at any time from any of the principles upon which I stand.

"As the civilian head of a body of the most loyal, able and efficient men and women I know, I have certain obligations to the Army commissioned, enlisted and civilian personnel. These duties include the upholding of their rights in circumstances where they are unable to protect those rights.

"I shall never accede to the abuse of Army personnel under any circumstances including Committee hearings. I shall not accede to them being browbeaten or humiliated. I do not intend to allow them to be deprived of the long established practice that they have the advice of counsel when the matter under consideration is one of essential interest to me as Secretary, as was the case with General Zwicker.

"From assurances which I have received from members of the Subcommittee, I am confident that they will not permit such conditions to develop in the future. In the light of those assurances, although I did not propose the cancellation of the hearings, I acceded to it. If it had not been for these assurances, I would never have entered into any agreement whatsoever. I want to make it perfectly clear that should such abuses occur in any quarter in the future, I shall once again take all steps at my disposal to protect the rights of individuals in this Department."

Sec. Stevens Confers to Check "Abuse" But "Memo of Understanding" Backfires

on Wednesday, he had no intention whatsoever to yield, bow or capitulate to Senator McCarthy or to anyone else on the matter of the abuse of officers testifying before Congressional groups.

Mr. Stevens was incensed over the treatment accorded Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, USA, CG of Camp Kilmer, N. J., in connection with the case of former Army Reserve Maj. Irving Peress, Dental Corps, who was given an honorable discharge after he had refused to answer questions put to him both by the Army and Senator McCarthy as to whether or not he was a member of the Communist Party.

The Army Secretary described as "humiliating" the treatment accorded

General Zwicker.

He ordered officers to disregard summonses from the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, headed by Senator McCarthy.

Then, on Wednesday, Mr. Stevens went to the Capitol and met with Senator McCarthy, Senators Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill.), Karl E. Mundt (R-S. D.) and Charles Potter (R-Mich.).

The Army Secretary went to the meeting unaccompanied by a single advisor. After the meeting, Senator Mundt read the following "Memorandum of Understanding":

"1. There is complete accord between the Department of the Army and the Senate Subcommittee on Investigations that communism and Communists must be rooted out of the armed services wherever and whenever found.

"2. There is complete agreement among us that the Secretary of the Army will order the Inspector General to complete the investigation which he ordered upon his return from the Far East on 3 Feb. in the Peress case as rapidly as possible; and he will give the committee the names of everyone involved in the promotion and honorable discharge of Peress; and that such individuals will be available to appear before the committee.

"3. In view of the fact that Senator Symington has requested that the calling of General Zwicker be postponed until his return from Europe, the appearance of General Zwicker will be deferred. If the committee decides to call General Zwicker, Secretary Stevens stated that at that time General Zwicker will be available.

"4. In view of the foregoing memorandum of understanding, the hearings scheduled for tomorrow have been canceled."

The reaction was instantaneous and virtually unanimous. The Senator was hailed as the victor in the meeting.

General impression in the Army was that in the absence of any indication of an apology for the insults hurled at General Zwicker and in the absence of any positive assertion that such abuse would not recur, the Senator, had, indeed, scored a smashing victory.

As the impact of the "Memorandum of Understanding" developed, Secretary Stevens took action to allay fears regarding what he considered to be the crux of the issue, namely the dignity and prestige of military officers testifying on the execution of orders given to them by higher authority.

The Secretary summoned top Army staff officers to a meeting at the Pentagon late Wednesday afternoon.

Although he did not reveal any details of the secret Capitol Hill conference, he declared that he believed he had been successful in making it plainly known that as civilian chief of the Army he would not stand by idly when loyal officers were abused.

Those present hoped that the Secretary would give public indication beyond the official terminology of the "Memorandum of Understanding" that assurance had been given him that the Zwicker Incident would not happen again.

For members of the Armed Forces, it is pertinent to note that for several days prior to the Capitol Hill meeting and in preparation for the scheduled public hearing on Thursday, Mr. Stevens had been compiling a strong case.

It can be stated that he had assistance of outstanding legal minds in this work. He was of the strong opinion that the time had come to protest publicly against derogatory allegations aimed at loyal officers of the Armed Forces.

Mr. Stevens was prepared to acknowledge that in the Peress case mistakes had been made. He was scheduled to outline procedures designed to prevent their repetition.

But primarily his objective was to bring to public attention the drastic effects on morale, and hence on national security, of the abusive treatment of Army representatives.

What happened behind the closed doors is not completely known. There is no doubt, however, that Senators Mundt, Dirksen and Potter strived mightily to bring Mr. Stevens and Senator McCarthy to accord.

Reports have been published that Senator McCarthy several times made motions to leave the room and break up the conference, and presumably the other Senators renewed efforts at these points to prevent a breakdown of the discussion.

The political implications—all present were members of the Republican Party—cannot be overlooked.

In any event, the sum total of the furor was that Mr. Stevens had decided to make a fight of the issue of officer integrity and respect, that he sincerely felt he had been successful, that the "Memorandum of Understanding," giving no clear-cut statement of such success, tripped him badly, but that this was offset by his forthright declaration Thursday night.

CITADEL SPEECH

Army officers are awaiting anxiously a scheduled address by Secretary Stevens on 19 March at The Citadel, Charleston, S. C., where General Mark W. Clark, USA-Ret., will be installed as president.

There is strong speculation among Pentagon leaders that Mr. Stevens will utilize this opportunity to stress his unequivocal support for the loyalty, integrity and ability of career personnel of the Army.

SAC Film Will Be Shot At Carswell, McDill AFB

The Defense Department has approved plans by Paramount studios to film parts of "Strategic Air Command," which will star James Stewart and June Allison, on location at Carswell AFB, Tex., and McDill AFB, Fla.

Actual shooting will begin at Carswell on 1 April. Technical advisors have already visited Carswell and McDill gathering background material, and the script has been completed by Bernie Lay, an Air Force reserve colonel who wrote the scenarios for "Twelve O'Clock High" and "Above and Beyond."

CRUSADE FOR FREEDOM—While Camp Kilmer's Commanding General, Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker (standing), contributes the first "Truth Dollar" to the Post's mammoth "Crusade for Freedom" drive, Col. Clarence O. Brunner, Chief of Staff (at desk), affixes his signature to the "Freedom Scroll." Collecting for Kilmer's official family is the General's secretary, Mrs. William Emmons. Lt. Robert Smith, aide-de-camp, looks on.

Manpower Pool Shortage Faces Reversal; Service Strength Cuts to Create Surplus

will rise steadily until there are about 1,750,000 in the pool in 1960.

The Assistant Secretary says that this figure compares with 240,000 who would have been in the pool had the Armed Forces been pegged at 3.5 million.

So now the problem is not to find sufficient manpower, but instead to determine what will be done with the surplus manpower in view of Congressional and Presidential statements regarding "equal liability of service."

In a speech to the National War College last week, Dr. Hannah gave no panacea solution. Nonetheless, he raised interesting speculative aspects, including Universal Military Training implications.

He emphasized that UMT "should have a fair trial, once the situation permits," but asked questions which indicated considerable doubt as to its early implementation.

Said Dr. Hannah: "Would it be better to preserve the integrity of the growing surplus of manpower in the pool against heavier demands on it than now expected, rather than to utilize it in the UMT program?" He said he asked the question "because of our unhappy experience to date with discharged veterans with an obligation to serve in the Reserve."

Dr. Hannah questioned further: "Considering the general public attitude towards requiring civilians to perform military duty regularly in peacetime, would we be successful in requiring the UMT graduates to drill regularly as the law contemplates?"

At the National War College, Dr. Hannah raised the possibility of modifying upward present mental qualifications for members of the Armed Forces.

During recent months, the Services have said that efficiency and economy would be served if mental standards were raised.

"To raise our standards," said Dr. Hannah, "would automatically reduce the surplus in the pool, but it may be that we should take advantage of the reduction in the Armed Force replacement requirements to upgrade the quality of the men coming into the Services."

Then, Dr. Hannah posed another problem for the students at the senior Service school.

He asked:

"What would be the psychological effect of UMT upon the public, especially the young men approaching military age and facing the prospect of military service? Would the possibility of being selected for only six months of active training under the UMT plan have an adverse effect on enlistment rates in the Navy and Air Force?"

Dr. Hannah's answer: "It seems almost a foregone conclusion that the enlistment rates would be affected adversely, possibly to the degree that those two Services would have to join the Army in relying principally upon two-year inductees to fill all their spaces."

He pointed out this would impose new demands on the manpower pool, since it takes more than 2½ two-year inductees to give service equivalent to that of one four-year enlistee.

Dr. Hannah said in the course of his comprehensive presentation that officials "with whom the final decision will rest" have not yet addressed themselves intensively to the manpower surplus prospect.

However, it appears obvious this matter will be one of growing concern at the Pentagon, White House and on Capitol Hill.

UNITED STATES ARMY

Three General Officers Given New Army Posts

Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens announced this week that three Army Generals have been reassigned to new posts.

Brig. Gen. Ira K. Evans, Deputy for Operations in the Office of The Quartermaster General of the Army, will leave the U. S. late next month for a new assignment with the U. S. Army Forces, Far East.

Brig. Gen. John P. Daley, Artillery Commander of the 2d Infantry Division in Korea, has been transferred to Headquarters, Fourth Army at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., effective sometime next month.

Brig. Gen. Edward H. McDaniel, Deputy Chief of Staff of the U. S. Army Forces, Far East, will return to this country, probably in March. He has been temporarily assigned to the Office of the Army Chief of Staff.

Specific duty assignments and successors to vacated posts will be announced later.

Vet Railroaders To Meet

The Military Railway Service Veterans, a group of ex-service railroad engineers who "high-balled" supplies to the front during WWII and the Korean War, will hold their ninth annual reunion at the Schroeder Hotel in Milwaukee, 17-19 Sept.

Col. Stanley Corps Signal Chief

Col. Charles A. Stanley has been assigned as Signal Officer, X Corps Group, in Korea. This is the Colonel's second tour of duty in Korea. From 1946 to 1948 he served as military intelligence advisor Signal Officer for the U. S. Army Military Group in Korea.

Too Much Air Power Stress, Says Retired Army General

Air power and new weapons are over-emphasized by U. S. leaders today, Brig. Gen. Marcus B. Bell, USA-Ret., told graduating officer candidates at the Ft. Benning, Ga., Infantry School last week.

General Bell said he was "disheartened and, I think, the world is disillusioned by the play some of our leaders are giving to air power and new weapons. I'm afraid they think those are the answers to present-day combat."

The retired Infantryman pointed out that he had seen machine guns and tanks make their debut on the battlefield, but the Infantry "had only to make a few changes to take advantage of these new weapons." He added that air power can come in to deal a harsh blow but that does not annihilate the enemy.

"There is no easy way to win a war," he said. "We physically go in and take the enemy. It is the Infantry which takes the land and that's what counts."

Turning to the advantages of air power and other fighting sources, General Bell advocated teamwork and urged the new second lieutenants to recognize its full value.

First to receive his Army commission at the graduation ceremony was 2d Lt. Robert G. Nedeigh, honor and distinguished graduate of the class. He has been assigned to the First Officer Candidate Regiment at Ft. Benning.

Army's Best Photo Lab

The new $27,000 Signal Corps photo lab at The Infantry Center, Ft. Benning, Ga., now ranks as the best on any Army post in the U. S., according to Capt. Harry E. Blomquist, pictorial officer.

The laboratory was remodeled at a cost of about $19,000, with more than $7,000 spent for new equipment.

CAMP POLK, LA.—A special parade and review of the five battalions of the 187th F. A. Group was the occasion for implementing a double shift in commands here. Col. Leslie L. Hittle, commanding officer of the Group, bid farewell to the battalions and welcomed the incoming Group Commander, Col. Frank L. Street. Colonel Hittle leaves the 187th to assume the duties of deputy post commander in the absence of Brig. Gen. ## Army's Senior QM Officer Retires After 36 Years

Maj. Gen. William Herschel Middleswart, Chief Quartermaster of the European Command of the Army, retires from active military service with 80 per cent disability effective 28 Feb.

Prior to his current assignment in Europe in 1950, with headquarters at many, General Middleswart was Assistant Quartermaster General of the Army. He was the senior active officer of the Army Quartermaster Corps at the time of retirement.

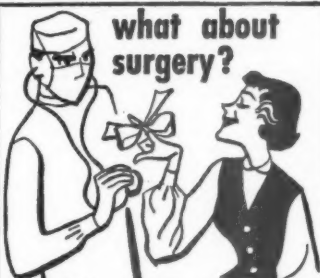

Maj. Gen. Middleswart

General Middleswart began his more than 36 years of active military service 15 Aug. 1917 upon his appointment as first lieutenant in the Army Reserve and assignment to active duty on that date.

Prior to the entry of the United States in World War II, General Middleswart was assigned in 1941 as chief of the Quartermaster Special Observer Group in London, England. Key positions held by General Middleswart during WW II include Quartermaster of the Services of Supply in North Africa; Quartermaster of the Mediterranean theater; Quartermaster of the Southern Line of Communications in France, and Deputy Chief Quartermaster for Administration of the European theater.

Following WW II, General Middleswart became Chief of the Clothing and Equipment Branch, Office of the Quartermaster General, Washington, D. C. ### AFMAA covers that, too!

Your membership in the non-profit Armed Forces Medical Aid Association gives your wife and kids up to $300 coverage for surgery by a civilian doctor. And it makes no difference whether it's done in a hospital or not! Of course, that's in addition to all you get for dependents' hospital room, doctors' hospital calls, emergency accident allowance. And maternity is covered.

What you get, in a nutshell, is this: In a civilian hospital—$30 for the first day, $10 a day thereafter; in a government hospital (now, listen!)—$15 for the first day, $5 each additional day; on maternity, you get a flat $75 regardless, unless twins are born or a Caesarean operation is necessary—then it's $150.

Your deposits are very little: $5.50 a month with wife only; $8.00 a month with wife and one or more kids. And each year you get a refund, to boot. Write now to the address below for your free illustrated booklet.

WACS To Leave MSC, Other Branches Excluded

The Army has announced that WAC officers currently assigned and detailed to the Medical Service Corps will be relieved of this duty and reassigned to other duties.

This change results from recent legislation which permits the Army medical service to recruit and train women for the Medical Service Corps.

WAC officers now detailed in MSC who meet the requirements of that branch may initiate a transfer to the Medical Service Corps if they wish.

This new policy does not affect the Quartermaster Corps, Corps of Engineers, Chemical Corps and other branches utilizing WAC officers.

However, a few WAC officers will continue to be assigned to the Army medical service as company officers commanding WAC detachments attached to medical facilities.

Jackson Port Engineer

THE MILITARY GENIUS OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN

By Brigadier-Gen. COLIN R. BALLARD

This book is one of the great military classics about the Civil War. It explains Lincoln's influence on the strategy of that conflict and proves that he not only chose good generals, but that he was himself an excellent (if completely unconventional) strategist. He understood the higher strategy of war as a whole, and Gen. Ballard demolishes the legend that Lincoln was a politician "whose bungling interference hampered his generals."

Queenfish To San Diego; Crew To Go Back To Pearl

The fleet type submarine USS Queenfish which left Pearl Harbor on 18 Feb., has arrived at San Diego, Calif., its new homeport.

For 61 officers and men of the Queenfish's 79 man crew, the departure from Pearl will be temporary; they will return in the Spring as crew members of the guppy-snorkel submarine USS Blackfin.

Cdr. Charles W. Rush, USN, CO of the Queenfish, will assume command of the Blackfin in San Diego and return to Pearl with all but 18 of his old crew.

The swapping of the crews of the Queenfish and the Blackfin is the choice of the crews involved. The move will save the Government the expense of transporting their families and household effects from Pearl to the West Coast.

Norfolk Supply Center Will Be 35 on 1 March

The Norfolk, Va., Naval Supply Center will observe its 35th birthday 1 March.

Commissioned a Naval Supply Station 1 March 1919, the huge supply activity has operated for three and a half decades with the mission of "Service to the Fleet." In 1927 it became the Naval Supply Depot and 20 years later, the Naval Supply Center.

With Rear Adm. John E. Wood, SC, USN, as commanding officer, the Center provides logistic support to the Atlantic and Mediterranean fleets as well as naval shore establishments from one end of the Atlantic to the other. The largest supply installation east of the Rocky Mountains, the Center employs thousands of workers in a plant of some 85 buildings sprawled over more than 4,000 acres of land.

Besides its warehouses, buildings and piers at the Naval Base, the Center operates fuel facilities at Craney Island and Yorktown; Cheatham Annex Depot near Williamsburg; storage areas at South Annex on Hampton Boulevard; and fuel and supply facilities at the Convoy Escort Piers.

The Center's land, buildings and stock are valued at nearly three-quarters of a billion dollars on the conservative basis of original cost.

Material supplied the fleet by the Center ranges in size from electronics items so tiny that thousands are required to fill a thimble to huge 20-ton anchors for aircraft carriers of the Midway class.

Escort Carrier 'Sitkoh Bay' Ordered Deactivated

The Navy this week ordered the deactivation of the first commissioned naval ship operated by Military Sea Transportation Service since the armistice in Korea.

The escort aircraft carrier USS Sitkoh Bay, which had been used to transport military aircraft in the Pacific and Far East, was ordered placed in moth-balls, and the commander of MSTs, Pacific Area, authorized to solicit bids from civilian shipyards on the west coast to overhaul the ship prior to her layup in the San Francisco Group of the Pacific Reserve Fleet.

The Sitkoh Bay was commissioned in 1944 and assigned to replenishment supply runs in the West Pacific. She was the only escort carrier during WW II to shoot down an enemy plane with her own guns.

The ship was first inactivated in 1947 but recalled to active duty three years later to supply military aircraft to troops in Korea and other Pacific bases.

Her departure leaves MSTs with four escort carriers left in commission to transport aircraft throughout the world.

Chaplain Meehan was the Officer in Charge of the Chaplain's School, Newport, R. I. in 1951. He was then assigned Force Chaplain of the Far East Naval Forces. Being ordered to Quantico, he was District Chaplain for the Third Naval District.

USMC Raises Standards For EM Reenlistments

The Marines have announced that standards for reenlistment in the Corps must be raised so that the professional quality of the enlisted man may be improved.

In making the announcement, Headquarters set forth procedures which will allow commanding officers to preclude the reenlistment of personnel in the Regular and Reserve Corps.

Commanding officers, the Marines said, are to screen all enlisted personnel who are scheduled for separation on or after 1 May 1954, approximately three months before their date of separation. In doing so, Headquarters said, commanders must carefully analyze all facts in each case to insure that all decisions are in the best interests of the Corps.

Under the new standards, individuals who, during their current enlistment (including extensions), or in the case of reservists during their current tour of extended active duty, do not maintain an average proficiency marking of 5 or better, and an average conduct marking of 4 or better, are not eligible for reenlistment.

In addition, the order stated, individuals who fall into one or more of the following categories may be retained or rejected for reenlistment at the discretion of commanding officers:

a. A Marine who has a record of numerous offenses. (Three or more non-judicial punishments and/or two or more courts-martial, or combinations thereof.)

b. A Marine who has not demonstrated leadership qualities necessary for further advancement in the Corps.

c. A Marine who has given evidence of possessing habits or traits of character similar to, but to a lesser degree, than those set forth in category (a).

After a commanding officer has reached a determination, the order continued, the following steps are to be taken:

a. Individuals who are not being recommended for reenlistment will have the reasons for the decision explained to them in compliance with paragraph 10327 of the MC Manual. In certain borderline cases a probationary warning may be given and final decision as to the disposition of the case may be withheld until a later date.

b. Those who are recommended for reenlistment will be encouraged to reenlist in accordance with existing programs.

These instructions also apply to requests for retention on active duty, requests for integration, requests for extension of enlistment, and requests for early discharge for the purpose of immediate reenlistment, as well as for the expiration of enlistment and completion of extended active duty.

Eight-year obligors who are not recommended for reenlistment are not affected by the new standards. These individuals are to be transferred to or retained in the Reserve, the Marines said.

Heads MSTs Sub-Area

Capt. Francis J. Grandfield, USN, has been named Commander of the Military Sea Transport Service, Eastern Atlantic Sub-Area.

He succeeds Capt. Forrest R. Bunker, USN, who has held the post since May 1952.

Captain Grandfield, who served in the Pacific during WWII, was Chief of Staff of MSTs, Atlantic Area since December 1951.

Previously, membership had been restricted to officers with seven years' commissioned or warrant service. All commissioned and warrant officers, both temporary and permanent, on the active lists of the Regular Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, not over 45½ years of age, are now eligible for full membership without regard to length of service.

Navy Mutual Aid is a nonprofit, officer-controlled Association organized in 1879 under the auspices of the Secretary of the Navy for the purpose of providing immediate aid to the dependents of deceased officer personnel in the form of a substantial cash payment wired or cabled anywhere in the world, and in the prompt preparation and submission of all government claims.

Now in its 75th year of successful operation, the Association has assets in excess of $26,000,000 and membership totalling over 11,000. Interested officers are advised to contact their local Nonresident Director or to address their inquiries to the Navy Mutual Aid Association, Navy Department, Washington 25, D. C.

U. S. AIR FORCE

ARDC Reorganized on Industrial Lines; Shift Weapon Systems Planning to Hq.

Lt. Gen. Donald L. Putt, USAF, Commander of the Air Research and Development Command, announced this week a sweeping reorganization and streamlining of ARDC headquarters in Baltimore, Md.

Aim of the reorganization, General Putt said, is to clarify responsibility and authority, fix accountability, and obtain more rapid, efficient, and economical management.

The new headquarters organization is somewhat similar to that of an industrial organization rather than the traditional military organization, which will facilitate both their own work and their dealings with industry. Nevertheless titles and certain terms have been retained to keep within the framework of the Air Force.

To Move to Andrews AFB

It also became known that long-range Air Force plans call for the transfer of ARDC headquarters from their present rented quarters in Baltimore to buildings to be constructed for them at Andrews AFB in Maryland near Washington, D. C. The Air Force has programmed a request for construction authorization and funds for the Andrews buildings to be included in the over-all program for the fiscal year 1955. However, this is still in process and has yet to go to the Bureau of the Budget and Congress. Even so, it would take about two years after the actual appropriation of funds before construction could get under way.

The shift to Andrews not only will give ARDC its own government headquarters, but will put it at an air base where it can operate more efficiently. The flying functions of the command now are performed from both Friendship International Airport and from Andrews AFB, thus involving extra travel and loss of time for personnel.

One of the major changes to come about from the new headquarters organization is the gradual shifting of early planning on weapon systems to the Baltimore headquarters. Much of this work was formerly accomplished by subordinate Centers of ARDC, principally at the Wright Air Development Center at Dayton, Ohio. However, no significant shifts in personnel will be involved inasmuch as only the planning functions will be transferred; implementation of the plans and development work will continue to be done at the WADC.

Technical Operations

The new headquarters organization provides for a Deputy Commander for Technical Operations and a Deputy Commander for Support Operations, who will be given greater responsibility and report directly to the Commander, General Putt, and Vice Commander, Maj. Gen. James McCormack, jr.

The Deputy Commander for Technical Operations is responsible for all aspects of the command research, development, test, and aircraft program. Brig. Gen. Floyd Wood, formerly Deputy for Development, has been designated Deputy Commander for Technical Operations. His staff will include four directorates:

Directorate of Research (Col. Don Flickinger);

Directorate of Development (Brig. Gen. Leighton I. Davis);

Directorate of Weapon Systems (Col. Ernest N. Ljunggren);

Directorate of Operations (Col. Fred W. Miller).

In addition, there will be a guided missile office headed by Col. H. J. Halberstadt, and a programming office headed by Lt. Col. W. J. Thomas.

The Office of Scientific Research, (Lt. Col. William O. Davis, Chief), which is responsible for maintaining a contract program with universities and other laboratories of research in areas of science relating to future Air Force developments, will continue unchanged in its mission and method of operation. It will, however, have an increased responsibility for furnishing technical and scientific advice to the other branches of the staff in Headquarters, ARDC.

Support Operations

The Deputy Commander for Support Operations is responsible for providing and managing resources and services. Brig. Gen. Kurt Landon, formerly Chief of Staff, has been designated Deputy Commander for Support Operations. His staff will include six directorates. They are:

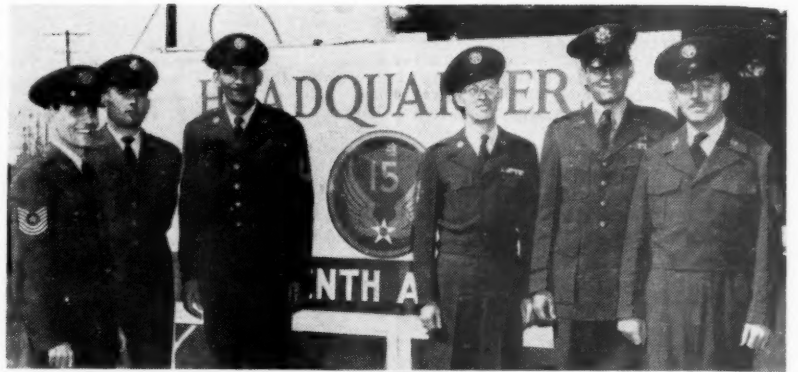

The Comptroller (Col. Milton E. Godfrey);

Directorate of Personnel (Col. Neal Guy);

Directorate of Installations (Col. D. H. Miller);

Directorate of Procurement (Col. J. R. Martin);

Directorate of Maintenance, Supply

In addition, there is a program control office headed by Col. C. E. Jackson.

Reporting directly to the Commander are the Plans and Policies Office (Col. Brooks Lawhon); Assistant for Operational Readiness (Col. J. R. Holzapple); Atomic Energy Office (Col. William D'Ettore), and Executive Officer (Lt. Col. R. G. Moll).

There is no change in the Special Staff, which consists of: Adjutant (Col. R. C. Lewis); Chaplain (Col. J. J. Wood); Information Services (Col. Leon Booth); Inspector General (Col. F. K. Fagan); Staff Judge Advocate (Col. L. G. Cooper), and Surgeon (Col. F. C. Kelly).

Supersonic Sled Designed For Bailout Experiments

To test bailout equipment for supersonic airplanes, the Air Force has designed a rocket-powered surface vehicle which simulates conditions a pilot would encounter if ejected from a plane traveling faster than the speed of sound.

The rocket sleds were built by Northrop Aircraft under the Air Research and Development Command's Wright Air Development Center Aero Medical Laboratory specifications. Tests with the 750-mile-an-hour sleds will be conducted on a 3,500-mile stretch of railroad track at the Holloman Air Development Center near Alamogordo, N. Mex.

The initial tests used dummies at comparatively lower speeds, but plans call for "live" volunteers to ride the sleds at speeds faster than any ever attained by man on the ground.

Inside the sleds, volunteers will be strapped to a chair that will rotate them head over heels 180 times per minute, exposing them to the same air blast forces that would be experienced by a pilot suddenly ejected from a supersonic airplane.

The experiments, which will be conducted by Lt. Col. John P. Stapp, Aero Medical Field Laboratory scientist at Holloman and winner of the 1953 John Jeffries Award in recognition of his contributions to aeronautics through medical research in deceleration studies, will provide a reliable method of testing advanced survival methods of protective equipment for crews of supersonic planes. The same conditions encountered by a pilot in ejection seat bailouts will be reproduced accurately on the ground.

The equipment consists of two sleds: a test vehicle and a propulsion vehicle. The propulsion vehicle, which has a rocket thrust up to 750 miles per hour, pushes the test vehicle until it reaches the required speed, then is retarded while the test sled coasts free.

Gen. Douglass Tells of Troop Carriers

Ind., and was redesignated the I Troop Carrier Command. It was this force which furnished trained units and individual replacements for the IX Troop Carrier Command in the European theater throughout the war.

With the capitulation of the Axis Powers in 1945, the IX Troop Carrier Command was reassigned to the United States and replaced the deactivated I Troop Carrier Command. A few months later, in March 1946, the IX Troop Carrier Command gave way to the Third Air Force. This rapid succession of events culminated in the merger of the Third and Ninth Air Forces on 4 Nov. 1946. By this action the last vestige of troop carrier individuality was lost until the outbreak of the Korean conflict made clear the necessity for the formation of a centrally controlled troop carrier organization.

Within any air force, the three precepts—flexibility, efficiency, and economy—are goals which must be attained to insure successful operations over a sustained period. These factors are continuously kept in sight by the Eighteenth Air Force with the four-fold mission of conducting airborne operations, air transported operations, air supply operations, and aero-medical evacuation.

Airborne Operations

The first of these, airborne operations, is the transporting of airborne forces into combat, and the aerial resupply of these forces either until they can be withdrawn, or be supplied by other means. The tasks involved in this type of mission include the aerial delivery of troops, supplies, and equipment during an initial assault and build up.

Air transported operations, not to be confused with airborne operations, are specially planned missions for the delivery of any Army or Air Force unit for combat employment into either enemy or friendly territory by air landing.

Air supply operations are those in which personnel and material with priority may be delivered to any unit, whether or not it is engaged in combat.

The aerial evacuation of personnel has become an important part of modern war. Rapid transferral of sick and wounded from the field to well equipped hospitals, with proper medical care en route, considerably reduces the mortality rate and logistical requirements for the support of patients and hospitals in a combat zone. Aircraft transporting supplies to forward bases accomplish routine medical evacuation on their return trips, providing maximum utilization of aircraft. Emergency aero-medical evacuation is provided on an "on call" basis.

The Eighteenth Air Force employs the following types of aircraft: C-124, C-119, C-122, L-20 and H-19. Any of these aircraft can perform the above functions. Four factors which determine the type aircraft to be used for a specific mission are the distance, the time involved, the load to be carried, and the condition of the airfields into which the aircraft must operate.

Training Problems

There is a great difference between the training of a troop carrier crew and the training of an ordinary transport crew. One of the greatest differences is formation flying. To insure "mass" and "concentration," drops of either personnel or equipment must be made from aircraft flying at low airspeeds and in close formations. Air discipline is an important part of any type of military flying, but in troop carrier aviation, it is the important factor. A troop carrier aircraft loaded with paratroopers is one of the most important and most vulnerable instruments of battle. Every crew is entrusted with a great responsibility that must be backed up with intensive training. This specialized training of pilots and other crew members is another responsibility of the Eighteenth Air Force.

The Eighteenth Air Force has participated in several maneuvers in conjunction with units of the Army which have provided simulated combat training for troop carrier wings and specialized units. Exercise SOUTHERN PINE, conducted in August 1951, provided training in air drop techniques, while Exercise SNOW FALL, in the winter of 1951-52 tested air transportability as well as aerial drops.

In the Spring of 1952, Exercise LONG HORN was held to test and train troop carrier units in air transported operations as well as airborne operations. Several months later, Exercise TEST

DROP, a series of operational missions in the Carolinas, was conducted to test new techniques, flight formations, and dropping procedures. The most recent exercises, WARM WIND and COLD SPOT, were conducted last winter in Alaska and northern New York state respectively.

Troop Carrier Wings

Eighteenth Air Force at the present has seven Troop Carrier Wings and nine Tactical Groups located in strategic positions throughout the country. The 62d Troop Carrier Wing with the 61st and 62d Troop Carrier Groups is stationed at Larson AFB, Wash.; the 63d and 64th Troop Carrier Wings are at Donaldson AFB, S. C.; the 314th Troop Carrier Wing with the 313th and 316th Troop Carrier Groups is located at Sewart AFB, Tenn.; and the 456th, 463d and 464th Troop Carrier Wings are stationed at Charleston AFB, S. C.; Ardmore AFB, Okla.; and Lawson AFB, Ga., respectively.

In addition, at Sewart AFB are located the 644th Troop Carrier Squadron Assault, Rotary Wing, and the 16th Troop Carrier Squadron Assault. We also have the 4418th Communications Group, the USAF Tactical Medical Center and the 7th Liaison Squadron located at Donaldson AFB. Five Aerial Port Operations Squadrons are assigned, with three squadrons presently at Donaldson and one squadron each at Sewart and Lawson Air Force Bases.

These units which make up the troop carrier element of General John K. Cannon's Tactical Air Command, work closely with the Army and Navy by providing effective air transportation in conjunction with ground and amphibious operations.

Named Aide at MFSS

Second Lieut. Albert Schiavone, MSC, has been named aide-de-camp to Brig. Gen. James P. Cooney, Commandant of the Medical Field Service School, at Brooke Army Medical Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

Immediately prior to his current assignment, Lieutenant Schiavone was an instructor in the School's Department of Military Sciences.

First SAC Intra-Command Fighter Contest Planned

Fighter wings of the Strategic Air Command will participate in an intra-command competition 17-23 May at Matagorda Island, Tex.

The contest, designed to assess the relative capabilities of SAC's fighter crews and wings, and to develop a competitive spirit among SAC crews, also will provide elimination trials for choosing SAC representatives in the forthcoming Air Force-wide Fighter and Gunner Weapons meet at Nellis AFB, Nev., 7-13 June.

The Matagorda event will test SAC fighter crews in air-to-air gunnery, both free-style and radar gunnery; air-to-ground gunnery, including dive bombing, low level bombing, rocketry, and panel gunnery; and special weapons delivery. Each crew will fly actual missions over Matagorda Island.

All SAC fighter wings will complete in the meet except the newly activated 407th Wing at Great Falls AFB, Mont., and possibly the 506th Wing at Dow AFB, Me.

Trophies will be presented to the winning wing in each of the fighter gunnery and special weapons delivery class. A third trophy will go to the overall winner of the competition, which will be the wing with the highest combined score for both phases.

Tool Engrs. Pick Col. Fletcher

Col. Leslie S. Fletcher, technical director and president of Sam Tour & Co., has been appointed Research Fund Director of the American Society of Tool Engineers, Detroit, effective 1 March.

Colonel Fletcher, a West Point graduate, served in the Ordnance Department where he held various assignments at Rock Island Arsenal and Frankfort Arsenal. Prior to WWII, in which he took part in the Salerno and Normandy landings, he was officer in charge of Pittman-Dunn Laboratory.

"The efficiency of our combat forces is contingent upon having experienced, well-trained career personnel."—PRESIDENT EISENHOWER.

Mr. Stevens' Stand. There can be no doubt in the minds of Service personnel of the sincere and firm determination of Secretary Robert T. Stevens to protect the prestige and morale of members of the Armed Forces. Any doubts that may have arisen from the one-sided "Memorandum of Understanding" issued following his Wednesday conference in the Senate should now be fully resolved by his forthright and vigorous statement of Thursday night.

As a long-time Reserve officer with active service in both World Wars, Mr. Stevens is aware of the morale problem from first-hand. As Secretary of the Army, he is part of the top Department of Defense team which has made the restoration of attractiveness to military careers a first-line project.

He has fresh in his mind the December report of the Womble Committee which devoted an entire section to the fact that "Public Respect For Constituted Authority Has Declined." That section, it should be recalled, deplored "slandering attacks and criticism of military leaders" and concluded with a caution that "the continued degradation of career military officers, as a class, can eventually do irreparable damage to our ability to attract and retain capable personnel." In taking issue with Senator McCarthy's treatment of Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker, Secretary Stevens was acting in line with the recommendation of the Womble Committee which urged that the "military departments develop and adopt a program to produce immediate and coordinated rebuttal with national publicity sanctioned by the Department of Defense."

If the initial reaction to this first great effort to uphold the dignity and prestige of the Services was bad, it was because he was outmaneuvered by leaders more experienced and adept at politics than he is, and because he was left for a time to wage the battle by himself without the intimate organizational support so freely available to his opponents.

It is unfortunate that the issue arose in conjunction with Communism, which was bound to becloud it. As one of the largest manufacturers in one of the nation's largest industries (textiles), Mr. Stevens can hardly be suspected of deliberately coddling Communists. Nor can the Army, more than 25,000 of whose members died in the Korean War with Communists and more than 77,000 of whom were wounded by Communists, be pictured as being soft toward Reds. If in dealing with the more than 1,500,000 men in their ranks the Army has erred, it will, as it has in the past, correct its ways. Mr. Stevens has shown not only a willingness but a determination to strengthen procedures concerning internal security.

Despite the twenty-four hour period during which many of his public and press supporters felt that he had let them down, it is now apparent that Mr. Stevens had not faltered in his stand for one instant. He had left the secret Senate conference satisfied that he had done a good job for the Services. His only error lay in letting his opponents speak for him. He was thus out-finessed momentarily by the one-sided statement which he had no hand in writing and which, like the Treaty of Ghent, made no specific reference to the issue for which he had fought. If, as in the case of the War of 1812, the issue does not arise again, the public can say that Mr. Stevens has won his point.

Time will tell whether the assurances given him will be carried out. If he should succeed in tempering the attitude of the Senator who made a major project of attempting to besmirch the reputation of General of the Army George C.

Marshall, it will be an accomplishment indeed.

Promotion Changes Are Criticized

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Recent issues of THE JOURNAL have had considerable space devoted to morale of the Armed Services. Much has been said about the adverse effects of morale caused by inadequate pay, losses of "fringe benefits" by congressional action, lack of understanding and respect from the civilian population, etc. Little has, however, been written about the impact on morale caused by vacillating policy within the services themselves. I speak of Army temporary promotion policies. I shall cite my particular case as an example.

I am a permanent Captain with permanent rank dating from 2 January 1949. Due to a wartime assignment in an inactive theater I was not able to attain a temporary rank above 1st Lt. although filling a T/O vacancy for Captain for a considerable period. In December 1950, under promotion policies then in effect, I was within 135 files of being promoted to temporary Major. Some of my contemporaries with the same date of permanent rank and with no temporary rank were promoted by virtue of a few files seniority on the promotion list. Then the policy changed.

Now, three years and over $2000 in pay difference later, I am farther from promotion than ever, particularly in view of "New Look" reductions in promotions. Whilst under present criteria, those fortunate persons promoted in 1950 will become eligible for another promotion in 1954 or 1955, if lucky, I might be promoted to Major in 1955 or possibly permanent Major in 1956.

How much longer must a few unfortunates suffer from lack of good assignments during WW II? My calculations indicate about 200 or 300 Captains in the same circumstances.

How about my record? I was fortunate enough to be given a regular commission in the first integration in 1946. Since my promotion to Captain, with the exception of about six months, I have filled either Major or Lt. Col. position vacancies. I have an efficiency index well above average and in 1953 was recommended for inclusion in the 5% out-of-zone promotions by an Officer of two star rank.

My pride, ambition and devotion to the Army have suffered a severe jolt, not only by loss of pay, loss of standing with my contemporaries who don't fully understand the reasons for my lack of advancement, not only because of reporting for duty to officers considerably my juniors on the permanent list, but largely from presenting myself to senior officers who cannot understand how an Officer today can be only a Captain when over 35 years of age. They naturally suspect the worst and act accordingly.

I feel my career has been placed in considerable jeopardy, if not in fact, ruined due to no fault of myself.

I too am now a job seeker and will, upon finding the proper opportunity, reluctantly and with considerable grief, join the exodus to the outside.

Seek Submarine Data

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

We are engaged upon a world-wide search for all material (books, magazines, manuscripts, papers, letters, etc., etc.) relating in any way to Submarines and Submarine warfare. To the other extreme, we are also extremely interested in everything of a similar nature relating to Naval Aviation. It would seem to us that there would be many among your readership who would be able to help us in this quest; especially those who served in that particular branch of the Service during World Wars I and II.

We have also prepared a very interesting list of books and other material relating to the history of the submarine, which we will be pleased to send with our compliments to anyone who writes in to us.

amples. He said, for instance, that we were forced to go into production on the World War II, M27 Recoilless Rifle, during the Korean emergency, when we could have had the recently standardized Battalion Anti-tank Weapon at a lower cost, with three times the penetrating power, four times the probability of hitting, and two-thirds the weight, if only the development money had been available in the pre-Korean period.

Those are hard facts. The Appropriation Committees should remember them when they are considering the reduced estimates for Research and Development, for they apply to all Services as well as to the Army.

In time of peace intensify research and development for weapons of war!

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Maintaining a close blockade on the Bismarcks, our air units on successive days inflicted heavy losses on enemy shipping outward bound from Rabaul and dispersed for safety in nearby coastal bays. Nine ships were sunk—six medium-sized merchant vessels and three escorting corvettes and patrol ships. This is the second convoy within the week to be practically annihilated in these waters.

50 Years Ago—With the formal inauguration of the first President of the Republic of Panama on 20 Feb. and the ratification of the Panama Canal Treaty by the United States Senate on 23 Feb., our relations and responsibilities with regard to Central America may be said to have entered upon the most important period in their history. The assured construction of the Panama Canal has already required the sending of a considerable military force to the Isthmus, and this force will probably be increased as canal work advances.

90 Years Ago—By the draft bill of 1864, drafted mariners were permitted to enter the Navy. Exempted from being drafted were "such as are rejected as physically or mentally unfit for the service; the Vice-President of the United States, the judges of the various courts of the United States, the heads of the various executive departments of the Government, the governors of the several states, and all persons actually in the military or naval service at the time of the draft, or who have been in such service for the term of two years during the present war, and been honorably discharged therefrom."

defense ON CAPITOL HILL

CAREER ATTRACTIONS for military personnel must be increased, says Representative Clark W. Thompson (D-Tex.). "Only the devotion and patriotism of the officers and men in the Armed Services can be counted on to keep our military forces staffed with the selected, trained and experienced men on whom our survival depends," declares Congressman Thompson. "We cannot afford to be indifferent to the reasons hundreds of such men are giving up military careers to enter business and industry."

A NEW MALE NURSES BILL has been sponsored by Representative Frances P. Bolton (R-Ohio). It would permit appointment of male nurses and medical specialists as Reserve officers in the Army, Navy and Air Force. Heretofore, legislation of this type has been related only to the Army. According to Mrs. Bolton, many qualified male nurses are assigned duties which have no relation to their nursing training. It is not likely that the Defense Department will give enthusiastic support to the measure.

"POOR PROPHET" is the tag used by Representative Samuel W. Yorty (D-Calif.) to characterize Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson during a recent discussion of Russian strategic bombers. Mr. Yorty called it "unspeakable folly" to base our estimate of Soviet airpower "on the factually unsupported impulsive hunches of a complacent Secretary of Defense." The California legislator thinks last year's cut in Air Force funds has wasted at least $1 billion and delayed the air buildup by two years. "Having proved himself such a poor prophet, Secretary Wilson should now graciously retire," says Mr. Yorty. It is recalled that it was Mr. Yorty who last year made public a paper prepared by Air Force officials outlining the impact of the cut in Air Force appropriations.

SHIP CONTRACT AWARDS which saw the Bath Iron Works, Me., not presented with a Navy O.K. to build three destroyers, despite a low bid, continues to draw the fire of Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R-Me.). She is up for reelection this year. Mrs. Smith was not pleased either when notified by the Bureau of Ships that the Bath Iron Works will not receive awards for destroyer escort construction because, in this instance, "it was not the lowest bidder." A House Armed Services Subcommittee was to go into the destroyer contracts at a session yesterday afternoon.

SHIP CONTRACT AWARDS which saw the Bath Iron Works, Me., not presented with a Navy O.K. to build three destroyers, despite a low bid, continues to draw the fire of Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R-Me.). She is up for reelection this year. Mrs. Smith was not pleased either when notified by the Bureau of Ships that the Bath Iron Works will not receive awards for destroyer escort construction because, in this instance, "it was not the lowest bidder." A House Armed Services Subcommittee was to go into the destroyer contracts at a session yesterday afternoon.

READERS HIT PAPER WORK, HOUSING

Paper Work? Phooey!

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Amen, amen, amen, brother! For many, many months I've been trying to write—to put into words—my frustrations about this horrible, strangling flood of paper. Now, a more articulate brother from an Allied Arm—Lt. Col. Gregory L. Higgins, GS, USA, has expressed my exact sentiments concerning this atrophic malady which has descended, it appears, upon both the Army and the Air Force.

To run an Air Force under the present conditions is like walking through a lake of molasses; by the time you brush away the ridges of paperwork, reports, etc., you've lost all track of your objective, tactically and strategically speaking. All real efficiency in the Air Force is being gradually lost in a bottomless morass of paper!

If we continue at our present rate, we'll have to have 90% clerks and the rest (minus those who maintain the Technical Orders and T.O.C.'s) to maintain the aircraft. It's gotten beyond the ridiculous stage; it's now serious. It's high time someone, top-side, stepped in and curbed all these paper-happy staff people, of all echelons, and let us get back to our primary business; i.e., flying; not making like a ticketage agency.

LT. COL., AIR FORCE

Wherry Act Troubles

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Are the committeemen who penned the Wherry Housing Act no longer committee members? Or are they just disinterested in the merits of their "benevolent" legislative product that was designed to mitigate the housing problems of military installations areas?

Eglin Air Force Base has Officer Wherry Units at the base rent of $84.55 p/month. The structures (all duplexes) were built for approximately $8,000. Furnished with a stove and a refrigerator, each duplex grosses $169.10 monthly, or 20.5% return p/year on the principal investment. (Sorry, all shares sold.)

Real estate of Northwest Florida has assumed a premium level only through the service personnel influx and the subsequent housing demand. The limited government housing completed here has not in the least bit helped the incoming personnel; but rather aggravated the real estate scene. For the Wherry Housing of this base has assumed not a competitive role with civilian housing (rental rates), but rather a price index status to be followed by private home owners.

Higher land and property values of other areas (i.e., Denver) are not proportionately reflected in Wherry Unit Rentals, as Lowry units are renting for considerably less.

In the final analysis, many people have concluded that the Wherry Act intent has gone askew. Including the 2/Lt.'s at this base who paid $10.00 p/month more for Wherry than they received BAQ. This was corrected only with the pay raise of 1952.

"Age 60" Retirements

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In your articles on the 30 & 5 retirement of RA permanent colonels, you fail to use quotation marks around "years service." For example: A friend here is included in this list. He was integrated RA in 1946, and commenced extended active duty in 1941. He has 13 years active duty service, but will retire involuntarily at 75% pay for thirty quote years service unquote, that is, from his 25th birthday (basic date given him on his integration into Regular Army). He is one of several I know of.

I am a reserve colonel, and served overseas in World War I, World War II, and am now in Korea, but am about to return home for release from active duty. I have over 30 years reserve service, and over 15 years active duty service. But I must await age 60, in 1960; and then would rate about 45% pay on retirement. RA officers with World War I service may also retire at 75% pay under another retirement provision, but this too does not pertain to the old-timers in the reserve.

The "age 60" provision in the reserve retirement laws should be eliminated, where there is 30 years reserve service, with active duty in wars and emergencies.

Navy Offers Freight Course

The Navy is calling for applications from Supply Corps lieutenants (j.g.), through the rank of commander for assignment to the Freight Transportation and Traffic Management Course which is scheduled for this fall at the Naval Supply Center, Oakland, Calif.

The nine month course covers every phase of freight or cargo movement from source of supply through tidewater terminals to the consumer. Involving a study of all modes of transportation services, the various terminals will be studied in detail.

The session for which applications are desired is from 4 Oct. 1954 to 24 June 1955.

The Spotlight Shifts to Latin America—

COMMENT ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

IF Secretary of State Dulles moves rapidly enough, he may get a brief breathing spell between the Berlin Conference (much of this week has been spent in explaining to Congressional committees what was done in Berlin as a "commitment" for the Five-Power meeting in Geneva next month) and the Caracas conference, at which he is due next Monday. As is our cheerful way in these matters, extremely little attention is publicly paid to Latin America, as compared with either Europe or the Far East. Yet at the Tenth Inter-American Conference, Secretary Dulles and the others of his delegation are certain to hear a number of unfriendly things about the United States, and some disturbing things about trends among our southern neighbors, and to be called upon to provide the local Venezuelan audience and the delegates from the several republics with a better knowledge of American policy than most of them now possess.

The Guatemala delegation has done a good deal more to arouse interest within Guatemala and elsewhere, and we will do well to note that while the hard core of anti-Americanism in that small nation is just as stoutly Communist as charged, it is surrounded and supported in its views by a respectable element which is not Communist at all, and which is having all its surviving anti-Americanism artificially revived. Thus, this past Monday provided a memorial meeting for Augustino Sandino of Nicaragua, with whom the Marine Corps had some lively dealings a generation ago. A Field Workers' Conference discovered on its program four notorious Communist leaders, plus another who disavows Communism but who last year backed the Reds' phony story of germ-warfare in Korea. All five were decidedly anti-American. The speeches included declarations that the "Yankee trusts" are aiming at "invasion of our beloved soil by foreign troops"; this will come to the Pentagon planning staffs as a surprise. In Mexico City, too, under leadership of former President Cardenas (who had his own controversy with the United States fifteen years ago over his expropriation of foreign oil properties) there has been organized a Friends of Guatemala Society, to arouse Mexican support for the neighboring republic in the expected dispute with the United States at the Caracas meeting next week.

The U. S. Ambassador to Guatemala, John E. Peurifoy, it will be recalled, visited the White House as well as the State Department in early February. Of his subsequent talks with the Guatemalan foreign minister, nothing has been divulged, but it is significant that Guatemala still plans no immediate reply to our State Department protests of last August against Guatemalan expropriation of United Fruit Company properties in that state. In this there is possibly a suggestion that Guatemala's official action toward United Fruit may be governed in some measure by the intensity of American criticism at the Caracas conference of Guatemala's notorious encouragement of Red activities not only in Guatemala but elsewhere.

BRAZIL has replaced both its War minister and its Labor minister in the past week, the former (General Santo Cardoso) because of his failure to make prompt report to the President of a protest by 80 Army officers against the behavior of the Labor Minister (Senhor Goulart). The latter has been charged with undue encouragement of Brazilian labor to the point which the officers held to constitute subversion; the climax appears to have been Senhor Goulart's doubling the minimum pay of workers to equality with the pay of a second lieutenant in the Army, a circumstance which has a faintly familiar ring outside Brazil. The new War Minister is General Euclides Zenobio da Costa, who was second in command of Brazilian forces in Europe in World War II.

CANADIAN armed forces this week have been engaged in their largest purely Canadian exercises to date, for testing of men and equipment in cold-weather operations. About 2,000 ground troops and airmen have been participating in Exercise LOUP GAROU, on the left bank of the lower St. Lawrence, 400 miles north of Quebec. Another exercise has been under way on the Alaska highway in northeast British Columbia, and a third at Cambridge Bay in the Arctic. The first has engaged paratroopers flown in from nearby Goose Bay field, making use of a Canada-invented computer which is designed to permit automatic calculations of speed, wind, parachute-delay, and other factors and produce pinpoint drops on the target area. The aim of course is to eliminate the need for a pioneering run and marker-drop, and thus increase the possibility of surprise. The Cambridge Bay operation is primarily a test of survival under adverse conditions; one of the participants is Maj. Hans Marechal, of the U. S. Strategic Air Command's Survival School at Reno.

ATHENS, GREECE—General J. Lawton Collins, United States Representative to the NATO Standing Group, is shown immediately after his arrival at the Hellenikon Airport. Among the dignitaries welcoming General Collins to Greece were, from left to right, Maj. Gen. George B. Barth, Chief of the Joint United States Military Aid Group, Greece; Mr. Cavendish Cannon, U. S. Ambassador to Greece; General Collins; Lt. Gen. S. Kitrilakis, Chief of the National Defense General Staff; Lt. Gen. A. Tsigounis, Chief of the Greek Army General Staff, and Air Marshal E. Kelaidis, Chief of the Royal Hellenic Air Force General Staff. General Collins is on an orientation visit to Greece as a guest of the Greek Government.

MEMONews And Gossip
For Journal Readers*

THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE will lose a classmate from the active rolls of the Army 28 Feb. when Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, Sixth Army CG, retires at age 60 for 50 per cent physical disability. Gen. Swing was No. 38 in the USMA '15 class, outranking General of the Army Omar N. Bradley (44) and then 2d Lt. Dwight D. Eisenhower (61). The Journal of 12 June 1915 published an Order of Merit showing Gen. Swing with 2156.53 points, President Eisenhower with 2083.96.

STATISTICAL EXPERTS assigned with U.S. Forces in the Far East have a perplexing problem on their hands. It has to do with preparation of reports. During combat, many more are required than when there's no fighting. At the present time, fewer reports are prepared than was the case during hostilities, but many more than before the Korea conflict started. A related problem has to do with security classification. An Air Force report notes in this connection that "many security ramifications depend on determining whether FEAD is still an 'active' theater of operations, or whether it ever was." No official decision has yet been made.

SECURITY CHECKS had no bearing on the two-week delay in announcement of AF temporary promotions. AF officials said this week that the use of a new promotion system this year resulted in the hold-up of the promotion names from a previously scheduled 15 Feb. release date to 1 March. They were emphatic that security clearance was not the cause. Nonetheless, it's a good bet that promotion selections will receive especially close screenings in view of developments in Washington this week.

CAPITOL HILL OPPOSITION may develop against the Defense Dept.'s plan to call all Army ROTC graduates to active service for a full two-year tour. It's been estimated this will require an additional 8700 officer slots in the FY '55 budget to prevent a large officer force-out program. Many Reserve leaders would prefer that large numbers of the ROTC second lieutenants serve only short tours on active duty, possibly to complete branch school training, and then be required to serve with Active Reserve plans. The Army does not look unkindly on such a proposal. However, Defense Dept. authorities, not to mention Selective Service officials, feel it would be unjust to defer men to complete college and then require only brief active service in comparison with draftees. The issue comes to a climax in the Appropriations Committee. If the money is voted for the extra officers, the problem's solved. Otherwise, a large force-out program threatens, unless Congress goes on record as advocating assignment of the ROTC grads to Reserve units to build them up and provide the Reserve with second lieutenants in which it is said to be greatly deficient.

"CANNIBALIZATION" is a frequently misused term, according to the AF I.G. He has reported that the word is frequently used when the more correct definition would be "controlled consolidation of short-ages."

FIFTY-THREE DENOMINATIONS currently are represented by Army chaplains on active duty. Present Chief is Maj. Gen. Ivan L. Bennett, a Baptist. He retires in April. His successor likely will be Brig. Gen. Patrick J. Ryan, a Catholic.

CURRENT PAY RAISE TALK for members of the U.S. Armed Forces makes pertinent a report from Canada which discloses that since end of WWII, members of the Canadian Forces have received 7 adjustments in pay rates. This compares with 2 in the U.S. Minister of National Defence Brooke Claxton has emphasized that the policy is to maintain "rates of remuneration in the Forces on a level with those in industrial employment." From 1949 to 1954, basic pay of a private in Canada has gone up from $68 to $92, that of a lieutenant colonel from $323 to $460. For the private, the subsistence rate has been increased from $54 to $61; for the lieutenant colonel, from $88 to $126.

CERTAIN CONTROVERSY is seen in the upcoming plan to modify the Reserve Forces. Should the concentrating on effective units knock out officers and men from earning retirement points, there's certain to be strong protest. Similarly, if the plan should elect to emphasize the buildup of certain National Guard and Reserve divisions to the exclusion of others, this too would draw heavy fire.

POLITICAL PRESSURE was not available to the Active Forces in a way that it can be applied by Reserve Forces. So it's not at all unlikely that there will be Capitol Hill fireworks in the implementation of a "New Look" plan for the National Guard and Reserve.

PROMOTION OF MEDICAL OFFICERS by the hundreds as a result of legislation passed last year (Capt. Peress was advanced automatically to major in this manner) caused a marked slow-down in other officer promotions, notably in the Army. The medic boosts filled vacancies and required funds for which there had been no previous planning.

A RE-UP BONUS BOOST will be asked in legislation now being cleared for transmittal to Congress. The Joint Chiefs have urged such action, complaining that under the present situation, there is too much incentive for a man not to reenlist. Top reenlistment bonus is now $360.

A NEW LOOK is coming in the Reserve Forces. A task force, headed by Marine Corps Maj. Gen. W. W. Wensinger, is working on the problem with a 1 April deadline for transmittal through the Office of Defense Mobilization to the National Security Council. The new plan for Reserve Forces will duplicate the strength cutback for Active Forces. Aim will be to put heavy stress on National Guard and Reserve "ready to go" units, concentrating on those considered essential for the first year of conflict. As now constituted, with the stress on numbers, rather than solid units, the Reserve Forces are considered inadequate for Atomic Age demands.

PENTAGON PUNSTERS couldn't resist speculating on the possibility of a Bergin-McCarthy routine. Maj. Gen. Bergin, the Army Adjutant General, may be called to testify, if Senator McCarthy's committee pushes its probe into the Peress case. However, many at the Pentagon believe the Army generals will not be summoned and that this was an unpublished part of the "Memorandum of Understanding."

Maxwell Wives' Course Hailed A Success; Second Orientation Presentation Underway

■ MAXWELL AIR FORCE BASE, ALA. The second presentation of "An Orientation Course for the Wives of Potential Commanders" was begun here on 19 Feb. and will continue through 12 March.

The course, sponsored by the Officers' Wives Clubs of Maxwell and Gunter, was offered for the first time from 22 Sept. through 16 Oct. 1953. During that time, its audience averaged 871 persons for each of the seven lecture sessions.

The current offering of the course results from the many requests and inquiries which followed the original presentation. The audience for this series, limited to 900 by the capacity of Maxwell's base theater, is made up largely of wives of students attending the various courses at the Air University.

The series of lectures being given now, follows the pattern of the original course, which was distinguished by the breadth and usefulness of its information. The subjects discussed during the sessions are as broad—at one extreme—as the major factors involved in the threat of Communism to the free nations, and—at the other extreme—as personal as the importance of family life to Air Force personnel.

Between these two extremes is a wealth of carefully thought-out information which serves to identify the Air Force wife in the fabric of the Armed Forces, in the world wide organization of the Air Force, and in the community where she and her family live.

In speaking of the purpose of the course at the opening session on 19 Feb., Lt. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, commander of the Air University said, "The wives of the Air Force Officers in the Air University are the custodians of the mental and physical health, the welfare, tone and spirit of a sizable amount of the future leadership of the Air Force. For this reason," General Kuter continued, "the Air University is formally and officially supporting and assisting the Wives' Clubs' efforts to operate this course which is designed to make your jobs a bit easier to accomplish should your husbands be assigned to positions of command—whether that command be of a squadron, a base, or some other Air Force unit or activity."

The course consists of the following lectures:

HOME ON THE RANGE

■ FT. BENNING, GA. An epitaph for a mythical Infantryman provides a thought provoking safety slogan on a range road here.

Arranged on a series of signs in the manner made famous by Burma-Shave, the epitaph reads:

A dashing young soldier—Named Homer McFudd—Disregarded all range signs.—Kicked every dud.—Now we're sorry to hear—This sign so strange—Marks Homer McFudd's—Home on the range.

Foreign Affairs

■ THE GENEVA MEETING of next month—always on the broad assumption that Moscow and Peiping are serious this time—should bring on a full review of the principal Far East problems. That is one of the causes of the anxiety freely expressed by numerous Republican Senators, who have continued to cling to their original belief that America was destined to attain a clear victory in Korea and thereby possess the power to dictate conditions in East Asia, rather than negotiate them. The sobering facts have compelled Secretary Dulles and others to revise that expectation and make the best of the situation which exists. Quite bluntly, it is apparent that, regardless of hopes which were reasonable in October 1950, we are not going to unite Korea through a victory in the field. French discomfort of recent months makes us equally aware that no French government would oppose a rational settlement in Indo-China, and that in these circumstances we, too, will do well at least to explore the possibilities of such a settlement. That is the background against which Secretary Dulles discussed what may be done at Geneva, and against which this past week he has listened to the Senatorial protests and done his best to adjust Senatorial thinking to an all-too-evident 1954 reality. Long ago it was accepted that the situation in Europe is a part of a world situation of which Korea and Indo-China are other parts. An early settlement on a basis wholly satisfactory to the United States is as improbable in one case as in another; the larger need is for a sensible reappraisal of what can be gained, followed by an effort to get that much, attended by a willingness to give what must be given in negotiation. The stakes are very large, and the larger purpose must not be lost through a blind desire to attain the smaller.

■ PAKISTAN has helped to break the log-jam of a week ago, when America's own desire to assist Pakistan to rearm (for effective participation in the Turk-Pakistan pact) was embarrassed by India's protest against any such arming of her neighbor. The jam was broken by Pakistan's own formal request for such aid. This was a necessary first step in the usual Mutual Defense Aid sequence—the President's finding that Pakistan is eligible, and the State Department's subsequent negotiation for a mutual aid agreement as to what specific assistance is desirable. Presumably the aid will be in the neighborhood of $25,000,000 worth of equipment suited to Pakistan's needs, not necessarily the latest and most complex of our military equipment. The objective previously discussed has been the creation of a sturdy bastion in the east, corresponding to the already strong bastion which Turkey supplies to the west of the rich oil fields. This may in time lead to the hoped-for complete defensive alliance in which Iraq, Saudi Arabia and Iran can be included, but that is not yet a remote possibility. The proffer of a Turk-Pakistan defensive alliance is in itself a very considerable factor for world security, and our own aid to Pakistan an inevitable sequel. Turkey, it might be added, is sure this year to seek larger economic aid than in 1953, at the same time that it asks the provision of later American equipment, notably Patton tanks for the present six light armored brigades. We will hear more of this at the next NATO meeting.

INDUSTRY * FINANCE

AF Aims to Keep Industry Healthy, Says Sec. Talbott

The Air Force has adopted a "new look" procurement policy which emphasizes quality over quantity.

Secretary of the Air Force, Harold E. Talbott, in the 24 Feb. issue of Planes, published by the Aircraft Industries Association, declared that the Air Force intends to avoid the "costly production peaks and valleys of the past" in order to maintain the aircraft industry in a "healthy state" capable of rapid expansion and competent to design, develop and produce better weapons.

Secretary Talbott said that under present defense plans, which call for increased importance of air power, the aircraft industry will be required to "maintain a high degree of mobilization readiness . . . with particular emphasis over the long haul on designing and developing superior aircraft, both manned and unmanned."

By June of this year, he predicted, the Air Force will have 21,000 active aircraft organized into 115 wings. Plans call for this level to be increased to 22,900 planes in 121 wings by June 1955.

"We do not propose to retrace the perilous and expensive pattern followed after World War II," Secretary Talbott said, "when the nation dismantled its defense industries, demobilized its armed forces, and allowed both to deteriorate almost to the point of impotence."

Mr. Talbott recalled that the Air Policy Commission reported to President Truman in 1947 that 20 to 25 per cent could be saved by substituting a succession of long-range procurement programs for year-to-year programming. However, he declared that the Korean build-up indicated that this estimate might have been "conservative."

"It is sound business practice as well as sound defense planning, I am convinced, to take advantage of such potential savings while maintaining an adequate level of air power during what President Eisenhower has called an 'age of peril,'" he said.

Bag-Propelled Vehicle Successful In Tests

The Army Transportation Corps has been testing a specially-constructed vehicle for moving cargo and personnel over rough terrain.

Known commercially as the Rolligan, the vehicle moves not on wheels or tracks, but on bags . . . low pressure pneumatic bags driven by a series of powered rollers on top of the bags.

The light-weight construction of the bags prevents power from being applied to a center axle as with conventional wheels. A special power transfer device was constructed using a series of rubber covered rollers resting on top of the bags and arched to conform to the bags. These rollers are powered by a chain drive from the truck type differential.

Operating tests over concrete blocks, timber, broken glass and iron fragments failed to produce any visible damage to the bags. The vehicle also was successful in tests conducted over marshy terrain, soft mud, shallow water, reedy area and soft snow.

Further testing has been assigned to the Ordnance Corps which will test the Rolligan over even more adverse terrain.

Former Sig. C. Engineer Joins General Dynamics

During WW II Mr. Ellis was an engineer in the Army Signal Corps. He holds a B.S. degree in electrical and chemical engineering from Wayne University, and is a member of the A.I.E.E.

53 Military Aircraft Models Now In Production

Planes, official publication of the Aircraft Industries Association, reported in its 24 Feb. issue that 53 different models of military aircraft are in production by 20 airframe manufacturers.

These aircraft, for use by the Air Force, Navy, Army and NATO troops, include 12 fighters, 12 bombers, 11 transports, five trainers, six liaison or utility craft, one anti-submarine warfare plane and six helicopters.

To power these craft, 23 different types of engines produced by eight manufacturers are used. Of these, nine are jets, 12 are reciprocating engines, and two are turboprops.

Nineteen of the 25 combat aircraft now in production are powered by jet engines. The remaining 28 types of military planes in production are transports, trainers, liaison and utility craft, and helicopters. Two of the transports are powered by turboprop engines, two of the trainers are jet-powered, and the remainder are powered by conventional engines.

A break-down of the ships in production follows:

Air Force—seven fighters (all jet-powered), five bombers (four jet-powered, one powered by combination of jet and conventional engines), eight transports (one turbo-prop-powered, the remainder conventionally-powered), four trainers (one jet-powered, three conventionally-powered), five liaison planes (all conventionally-powered), and three helicopters (all conventionally-powered).

Navy—five fighters (all jet-powered), four attack bombers (two jet-powered, two conventionally-powered), three patrol bombers (all conventionally-powered), one antisubmarine warfare plane (conventionally-powered), three transports (one turbo-prop-powered), one jet trainer, one conventionally-powered utility plane, and three helicopters (all conventionally-powered).

AF To Lease 4 Press Plants To Private Groups

Air Force plans to lease four heavy press plants to private industry was approved this week by a Senate Armed Forces subcommittee.

The plants, which can stamp out airframe parts in a matter of minutes, are located at Adrian, Mich., Buffalo, N. Y., Halethorpe, Md., and Cleveland. However, only the plant at Adrian is operating at the present time. The others are near completion, but an Air Force spokesman said all four were almost ready for private operation.

The plants, which are equipped with extrusion and forging presses capable of exerting tens of thousands of tons of pressure, would be leased to various companies for periods of approximately five years. The Government would receive compensations ranging from 4 to 6 per cent of the companies' net profits.

Named to Rifle Board

Mr. Clarke, who comes to North American's general offices at Fort Wayne, Ind., from Cleveland, will assist Mr. Edgett in administering the firm's operations in the field of household goods, office equipment and trade-show display moving.

Prior to joining North American, Mr. Clarke practiced law in Cleveland for 23 years, and during that period, he specialized in corporate matters, the defense of law suits for casualty insurance companies, and representation of motor carriers.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Merlita O'Neill

THE Senate Appropriations Committee is now considering the Coast Guard's House-passed $181,175,000 budget for fiscal year 1955.

The budget passed the House practically unchanged from the amount requested by the President. The only change is a minor adjustment in printing costs.

A Coast Guard official, however, pointed out that the CG would still get the same printing done for a smaller amount.

The 1955 budget stands at $30,675,000 less than the $211,850,000 which was appropriated in 1954.

The following table gives a comparison of the 1954 Appropriation and the 1955 Appropriation which has passed the House.

	1954	1955
Operating Expenses	$188,250,000	$155,900,000
Acquisition, Const. and Improvements	2,500,000	3,000,000
Retired Pay	18,600,000	19,775,000
Reserve Training	2,500,000	2,500,000
	$211,850,000	$181,175,000

Coast Guard officials said the reduction was accomplished by curtailing or eliminating activities which were provided by the Coast Guard to meet increased military operations.

The following activities, the Coast Guard said, will be or have been reduced:

1. Ocean Stations will be reduced from 10 2/3 to 5 2/3. This will mean the laying up of 12 ships which have been assigned to this duty.

2. The expanded Search and Rescue program in the Pacific (west of Pearl Harbor) is discontinued. Four DE type ships have been decommissioned and returned to the Navy. Aircraft requirements have been reduced by 11 planes.

3. The Port Security program is modified by the elimination of shore side patrols of waterfront areas. This entails a reduction of 2,053 men and officers.

4. There will be an over-all reduction in the average number of military personnel on active duty of 5,182. This will mean a reduction from 33,839 to 28,675 in 1955.

5. There will also be a reduction in the average number of civilian personnel of 822. The figure will drop from 5,270 to 4,448 in 1955.

TAC Sets Spring Exercise To Test Field Operations

Exercise TACAIR 54-7, designed to test and train tactical air units in all phases of field operations, is announced by General John K. Cannon, USAF, commander of Tactical Air Command, Langley AFB.

The exercise, to be concentrated in the North and South Carolina area during April and May, and involving units of Tactical Air Command's Ninth and Eighteenth Air Forces, will be one of the largest training exercises ever conducted by Tactical Air Command.

General Cannon has named Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglass, Jr., USAF, Eighteenth Air Force commander, as exercise director. He will be responsible for all troop carrier, fighter-bomber and tactical reconnaissance operations during the exercise.

General Douglass will be assisted by Maj. Gen. E. J. Timberlake, USAF, Ninth Air Force commander; Brig. Gen. E. H. Alexander, USAF, Eighteenth deputy commander, and Brig. Gen. Charles D. Jones, USAF, commander of TAC's 405th Fighter-Bomber Wing.

Confirm Air Generals, Three Receive 4th Star

The Senate has confirmed President Eisenhower's nomination of three Air Force lieutenant generals to be general officers, as follows:

Lt. Gen. Earl E. Partridge to be Commander, Far East Air Forces.

Lt. Gen. Orval R. Cook to be Deputy Commander in Chief, U. S. European Command, replacing General Thomas T. Handy, USA, who retires.

Lt. Gen. Edwin W. Rawlings to continue as Commander of the Air Materiel Command, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Also confirmed was the nomination of General O. P. Weyland, FEAF Commander, to continue in four-star rank as Commander of the Tactical Air Command where he will replace retiring General John K. Cannon.

Lt. Gen. Bryant LeM. Boatner will be a three-star officer in his post as Deputy Chief of Staff, Materiel, where he replaces General Cook.

Maj. Gen. Truman H. Landon becomes Inspector General with rank of lieutenant general.

Rocket Fuel Hazards

The Army Chemical Corps has been studying means of combatting the poisonous effects of jet and rocket fuels.

Dr. Stephen Krop, speaking before a recent meeting in New York of the American Rocket Society, outlined the toxicological effects of selected propellants and recommended preventative and medical measures.

Dr. Krop stated that the Chemical Corps' Medical Laboratories has been studying the toxic potentials of chemical substances to determine how to avoid dangerous contact, and the treatment required in case of exposure.

This study, known as the Military Chemicals Program, has been conducted jointly by the Army, Navy and Air Force to explore the dangers involved in handling these fuels as well as those connected with fire extinguisher agents.

Students Win National Honors

Vice President Richard M. Nixon has announced the top five places on his examination to determine his candidates for West Point.

Four were won by students of Braden School, Cornwall-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Top place in this examination, which was national in scope, went Harold C. Lyon, son of Col. and Mrs. H. C. Lyon, now in Germany. Mr. Lyon scored 97% on the test, the highest grade attained in competition by a student of Braden's in the past four years. Since he had previously won Senator Kennedy's appointment in Massachusetts, the principal appointment went to Richard B. McPeck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie R. McPeck of Allendale, N. J.

The first alternate selected was Hugh M. Fisher, son of Col. and Mrs. Samuel H. Fisher, Ft. Devens, Mass. The third alternate appointment was tendered to Robert Moscatelli, the son of Col. and Mrs. T. G. Moscatelli of Ft. Lewis, Wash.
